FEBRUARY 2022

GET INVOLVED

There is a certain pride that comes from being part of something greater than yourself. This is often seen to be a basic human desire – one whose fulfilment results in some fundamental sense of happiness. And, in some ways, what that “greater thing” is can be a bit irrelevant.

Most of us have had the positive experience of being on a winning sports team – even in pick up games. Or being part of a successful work group, being in a musical group – singing or playing or otherwise participating.

Sometimes the “thing” is passing. There was one recent college graduate who, having played on a successful community volleyball team, described the after-tournament celebration as feeling like “my evening looked like it was part of a beer commercial.”

In one sense, it’s possible to look upon your community as that “bigger thing.”

Many of us living on Oak Meyer Gardens (OMG) feel like we are proud and lucky to live where we live and how we live. The homes are well-built, well-maintained, and appreciating in value.

The common areas – including the many little monuments and surrounding plantings – add a definite charm. The Beautification Committee has been working hard to make them even nicer.

And, the neighbors seem to be special. Our fellow “OMG-ians” lead interesting personal and professional lives. We have skilled professional musicians. Successful advertising and marketing people. People in creative areas, including art and writing. Retired and working journalists. Senior academics. Entrepreneurs. People with interesting and challenging jobs in the tech sectors. Educators. And just plain interesting and accomplished people of all sorts.

The ongoing challenge to us all is to make our “community” be more than just a “neighborhood.” The community is the sum of the energy, efforts, good will, and good works of us all.

So, think about ways to “do something” to make things better. In terms of something “greater than yourself,” there are many options. And they are not mutually exclusive.

With current conditions and the significant change to more “work from home” activities and the on-line meetings replacing the usual face-to-

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

DEAR OMG NEIGHBORS,

There are many things that go into making a great neighborhood community. One, I think, that tops the list is going out of the way to know one's neighbors. Others may be just looking out for the neighborhood kids, or even performing a kindness such as shoveling a walk or sweeping up those dreaded gumballs. There is another act that most people don't think about as contributing to a great community – that is paying one's annual dues to the HOA. By far the largest part of our dues goes to the upkeep of the monuments, markers, and their landscaping, and to services to keep our neighborhood clean and tidy – leaf pickup, Christmas tree removal and dumpster days. These all contribute directly to the appearance of our neighborhood and, indirectly, to the value of our homes. As an HOA Board member, I would like to thank each and every one who supports Oak Meyer Gardens in this manner.

Over the past year, the Board, along with the OMG Committees, has identified three different areas where additional fiscal support would make a big difference to our significance as a community – landscaping, communications, and branding. Our committee members and volunteers have each given hundreds of hours to planning, planting and watering our urns and new plantings. In addition, others have updated membership rosters, the website and Facebook page, sent announcements out to neighbors and welcomed new residents. As generous as they all are, the demand on their time is not sustainable. We see that we are subsidizing the HOA's budget on the back of already busy volunteers.

Oak Meyer Gardens has 61 monuments and markers, more than any other HOA in the area; J.C. Nichols must have intended them as a focal point for the development. Last autumn, we spent the last of the reserve money, dedicated three years ago for landscaping, to update the plantings surrounding the gateway monuments on either end of Meyer

Boulevard. These improvements cost us $11,275. We would love to continue to make similar improvements to the landscaping at Holmes and Rockhill, and then expand in subsequent years to the smaller markers throughout the neighborhood. This would require an annual budget dedicated to landscaping improvements, something we haven't had in the past. In addition, it would make sense to increase the budget for our landscaping contractor to include a second autumn leaf cleanup around our markers, and turn over to them the responsibility for watering the urns and new plantings throughout the growing season – a very labor intensive project.

Digital communication has expanded dramatically over the past 20 years. Preferred communication modes by our members to receive HOA information are as diverse as the members themselves – email, Facebook, Twitter, US Postal Service, newsletters, the Website, Instagram. It has become obvious to the Board that we are not reaching all of our members with notices of events and services. And using any of these forms of communication successfully requires a thorough list of contact information for all members and a coordinated effort on all media platforms. Other active HOAs have hired a paid Communications Manager with great results. The Board would like to pursue this strategy as well.

Thanks to Butch Rigby and other developers, the north end of our neighborhood is starting to be known citywide as East Brookside. More businesses and trendy restaurants are moving in. Much of the city knows where Armour Hills or Brookside is located; we would like for Oak Meyer Gardens to have its own identity. Volunteers have researched the idea of adding stylish, identifying banners to the utility poles on some of our more traveled streets. These are affordable, especially if we dedicate funds and save for them over several years.

Special landscaping and masonry projects over the past three years have reduced our reserves to an face interactions, all of the ways to get involved should be explored.

In the firm belief that better days – after Covid and into a more normal life – will be here soon, now would seem to be a good time to contemplate how one will engage or reengage in the future. Your OMG community offers many ways to help – and that help is needed and would be appreciated.

There are social events. The OMG website. The OMG Facebook page. Board service. Block Captain participation. Committees of a variety of tasks. All of these efforts could use your excellent participation and involvement.

The point is to take some of these steps – and do something to increase your involvement. As John Donne wrote: “No man is an island entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main ...”

And, as Red Green used to say on his Canadian based TV show that used to air on PBS: “Remember I’m pullin’ for ya – we’re all in this together.” So, start thinking about and looking for ways to play a greater part in something – something larger than just oneself. You’ll be better off – and so will your community.

amount recommended by the Finance Committee to maintain for emergencies. We believe this has been money well-spent. However, to provide the improvements identified above, we would need to raise annual dues. Dues were last raised by $20 back in October of 2014. The Board is recommending that we raise our dues by $50. This is a per residence price of about a nice latte once a month. This increase would still leave us on the low end of average dues paid by active HOAs to the north and west of us. It would also be retroactive, so it would be presented as an amendment to this year’s 2021-2022 budget. Instead of holding the vote during a special members’ meeting, we will be having a general referendum. If passed, a second invoice will be mailed early this spring to allow the improvements to begin immediately.

In preparation for this referendum, I will be sending this letter to all OMG members early in February with a few more details. You may have already received it. There will be a special members’ meeting held on Thursday, February 24th, from 7-8:00 P.M. at St. Peter’s School Cafeteria to discuss the proposed increase and to answer any questions. Voting on the budget amendment will take place in early March. A mail-in ballot will be included with the letter stating the date of the voting deadline, but electronic voting will also be made available through the website. Much of the website is accessible to the general public without a membership, but website registration will be required in order to reach the voting page. Now would be a good time to go and register at www.oakmeyergardens.org. If you are unable to attend the special meeting and still have questions, please feel to email me at hoa@oakmeyergardens.org and leave your contact information. I would be happy to speak with you one on one.

To end, I would just like to say that Oak Meyer Gardens is a special and diverse community. The Board wants to include as many members as possible in this decision. It is up to all of us to decide how we want our community to move forward.

CHERRY STREET SPIRIT

I have had the pleasure of living on Cherry Street for the past six years and been graced with countless memories of community and the charm of old homes with youthful energy. The block of Cherry Street south of Rockhill Road and between Locust Street and Kenwood Avenue is a special block indeed. Composed of people of all different backgrounds, this segment of Cherry Street finds a way to unite everyone together without fail every year. Through events like the Cherry Street Block Party and the yearly Christmas luminaria, there is a tight knit community of people who come together to celebrate each other.

On June 23rd, 2018, the Cherry Street Block Party celebrated 50 years. Rumor has it that this is the longest continuously running block party of the city. This is not your typical, snooze-fest block party. I'm talking fire trucks, pet parades, face painting, pickle ball, slip and slide, bingo, movie night, bike obstacle courses, kegs of beer, delicious food, and more. The street is closed all along the quarter mile of the block so that members of Cherry Street can enjoy each other's company and the warm summer weather. No wonder it has been happening for 50 years.

Another classic tradition is the Christmas luminaries.

According to the National Park Service, the tradition of luminaries has origins back in 1590 when men would light small bonfires to guide them back to their camp. However, in the 21st century on Cherry Street, the luminaries are used to light our sidewalks and guide us to our homes. Each home receives around 30 bags to light their pathways. They are normally made beforehand as a community at the home of Keith Ludwig and Helena Vasconcellos with warm drinks and chili. It is understood whoever lives in the home 6835 Cherry Street will host the assembly party and that tradition has been passed down from homeowner to homeowner. The pandemic has altered the gathering, but the tradition stands strong. The tradition has happened for over 60 years and will surely happen for years to come.

EVOLUTION OF AN OMG BUILDING

In the mid-nineteen sixties, 633 East 63rd Street – on the southwest corner of 63rd and Holmes – was an office building containing several businesses. One, an association management and public relations firm also was an incubator for a start-up advertising agency that has since grown remarkably – and is now known as Barkley.

Over the subsequent years, the building housed a number of enterprises, including a social welfare agency.

As part of the Brookside East improvements, under the auspices of BB63 II, and the developer Vincent “Butch” Rigby, the building has undergone a major transformation which includes the addition of second story, a balcony, and an elevator. Rigby’s company acquired the property in 2014

Now this attractive building provides sustenance for the body and soul. It houses several interesting businesses.

You can improve your head through the Architecture Salon and or by visiting Counseling Solutions KC. One of the principals of this practice, Susan Brandt, is a long-time OMG resident. Also in the building is New Strong, a family-oriented practice for building resiliency within families was created and is managed by two credentialed sisters, Laura Probasco-Johnson and Leah Probasco-Burns.

Formerly, a Pilates studio was in the building, but the pandemic has motivated them to move.

Sustenance is also provided by Arvelisha Woods and India Monique, of Mattie’s Foods. Their fare is vegan – but even hard-core carnivores love it.

BKS Artisan Ales is a craft brewery in the building. Started in 2017 by Brian and Mary Rooney, the craft brewery produces and sells all of its beer at this location in East Brookside. Draft pours and cans to-go are available in the tasting room Wed/Thu 4 to 8pm & Fri/Sat 1 to 8pm. To-go beer can be preordered online or at walk-up. In addition to having a business in Oak Meyer Gardens, the Rooney’s also reside in OMG with their dog Pivo.

The sort of anomalous tenant is the Kansas City office of an international law firm: Rimon, with 45 offices in 14 countries and on five continents. The three attorneys at 633 share a four-office suite and conference space. They had previously been in another Rigby building but needed more room.

The building at 633 is just one of the Rigby’s transformative developments along 63rd street. The office building to the west of 633 – at 601 - is called the Brookside Professional Building and it has small business tenants, including some in various forms of health care. There are buildings across Holmes, which once were medical facilities and later housed parts of Cleveland Chiropractic College – now known as Cleveland University-Kansas City and located in Overland Park.

Highest profile current tenant is Plate Restaurant, at 701. On the north side of the street, there is an events facility: The Magnolia – Brookside. Several years ago, OMG held the annual homeowners’ meetings in that charming space.

The energy, charm and livability of this edge of our community is a promising sign – and gives indications of even better things to come for the neighborhood.

HELP KEEP OUR NEIGHBORHOOD SAFE

A recent meeting with Kansas City Police Department, Community Involvement Officer Marquez discussed ways in which to keep us all safer.

Officer Marquez knows that an engaged neighborhood is a safer neighborhood and actively engaged communities help prevent crime – and can help solve any crimes that might occur.

One way you can participate in the KCPD Neighborhood Watch Program is to have your surveillance camera registered with department.

Here is how it works:

You register your camera with the police department. KCPD does not get access to those cameras at will. Residents must grant access to KCPD through registration for each event.

Program advises KCPD that there is a camera around the area where a crime may have occurred to assist with possible leads.

The Kansas City Police Department will not be connecting to your cameras in any capacity. You are simply telling us that you have cameras, and where they're located, nothing more.

Your privacy is important to the Kansas City Police Department. They promise to make every effort to protect it. This information will not be released to any company or person outside of the Department. Even within the Kansas City Police Department, only those officers/detectives who have a reason to have the information will have access to it.

Your neighbors will only know if you are registered if you tell them (and the department hopes you do)! However, they understand that sometimes it is a better option to not have your neighbors know. The Kansas City Police Department will only provide this information to members of the Kansas City Police Department who have a valid investigative reason to know you have cameras.

If you move or no longer wish to participate, you only have to tell the police to remove your cameras from the Registry.

You can learn more at: WatchKC Program: www.kcpd.org/get-involved/watchkc/

LONG TIME NEIGHBOR MISSED BY LOCUST STREET FRIENDS

We live in a world filled with mobility. People grow up, leave home, frequently move to another part of town, or to a completely different city and state. So, the story about the late Michael Chiapetta, who lived nearly all of his life at 6649 Locust Street is a rare tale indeed.

Michael, who passed away on September 9, 2021 – at age 80 years and 141 days, grew up in that house – with parents Marco and Rosa and sister Carmeline.

Other than his time in the U.S. Air Force and an early career engagement in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Michael was on Locust Street. He probably was on the block when “Mr. K.” – Ewing Kauffman – started grinding up oyster shells to create the hugely successful Marion Laboratories.

His neighbors called him “The Patriarch of Locust Street.”

Next door neighbor Jane Cory remembers him as a good neighbor in many ways. She and her family have been on Locust for 29 years.

“He was great with our kids. He used to hang homemade birthday signs on our door to help celebrate. He also took very good care of his property and was an enthusiastic user of Old English furniture polish on his extensive woodwork.

With a career in the beverage industry, Michael was a long-time associate of the Berbiglia Wine and Spirits chain. In its heyday, Berbiglia was the go-to source for an extensive selection of fine wines in Greater Kansas City, with more than 20 retail outlets at its peak. For many years, they were on 63rd Street in Brookside.

Michael’s involvement with beverages made him a great host. Jane remembers one marvelous meal in particular.

“Michael and one of his friends hosted an amazing Italian meal for about nearly 20 of us. It was truly elegant and memorable.”

As he aged, Michael had health issues, including some heart issues. He was planning to move to a senior living facility, St. Anthony’s on East 68th Street – but his health failed, and he died before he could relocate.

From his obituary:

Mike was fondly known by his friends as “Cbips”. Mike was a graduate of St. Peters Grade School, Rockburst High School, and Rockburst University. He served in the US Air Force Reserves 1963-69. From the earliest days of Little League Baseball, Mike became a lifelong fan of the Kansas City Royals. He spoke often of the Plumbers Local #8 and the Joe Nolen CUBS 3/2 league teams which he coached.

Liza grew up in Osage City, Kansas. She attended St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota and graduated with a bachelor's degree in Economics. She started working at Cerner Corporation in 2014 and is currently a Senior Client Implementation Manager for PayIt. Liza and her husband Tyler moved to Oak Meyer Gardens in 2020. She and Tyler share their home with their Golden Doodle named Freddy, who has made an appearance on the front cover of The Acorn.

Over the past year Liza has gotten to know many fellow OMG neighbors on her block and even more throughout the neighborhood thanks to Freddy's friendly nature. Liza loves the charm and character of all the OMG houses and looks forward to getting to know OMG even better by serving as a board member.

In addition to her project management and organizational skills, Liza has taught yoga for past four years and worked at both CorePower Yoga at its Plaza location and at the Woodside Health Club. She currently teaches a monthly yoga class for her workplace.

TURNING AN OLDER HOME GREEN

OMG resident Rita Norton has been modifying her home to use solar power and conserve energy since 2004. She has solar collectors on her roof, has made energy-saving modifications to her 80+ year old home, and has been an enthusiastic advocate for solar and energy conscious home owning.

Rita has observed that adding solar collectors makes sense to anyone who can scrape the funds together. And the passive and inexpensive changes that were also made to her old house are far more important for livable and environmentally responsible housing.

A quick lesson on solar:

1st: The solar panels convert light into direct current (DC)

2nd: That direct current is induced into wires that join in the (white) combiner box at the center of the panel array on the roof. This direct current travels through a wire-filled conduit through the attic and down the outside of the house to the batteries in the basement.

3rd: Storage of energy in the batteries in the first priority of the system. Before energy/potential electricity from the sun is used for lights in the house or for sale to Evergy it is stored for those times when Evergy power is interrupted or at night.

4th: The inverters then change the direct current into alternating current (AC/DC, remember?). The power can now be used by appliances. Finally, surplus is sold to Evergy.

However, solar is just one part of a greater energy efficient home life. Old houses can be drafty. So, certain steps can help reduce the energy loss through drafts – and, therefore, lower the need for cold weather heating and warm weather cooling.

The magic word is caulking:

The ducts that lead from that basement furnace to the various spaces of a house are rarely seamless. Every bend, turn, and connection between those tubelike passages creates the possibility of lost heated or cooled air. To prevent the waste of natural gas and electricity, those gaps and seams need to be sealed.

Look for and feel for every single seam you can find on those tubelike passages and channels that lead away from the furnace. Being uneasy with spiders and unidentifiable dust bunnies, I put a scarf over my hair and used a long-handled, stiff duster to clean off those long-ignored spaces before I started feeling them. (Piles of dust and spider eggs prevent a good seal between the sealant and the surface anyway.) Where there's a gap, however tiny, seal it.

Characteristically, the room temperature difference between the first and second floors, with air conditioning on, was four to five degrees. After a session of caulking, the temperature on the second floor was no more than three degrees higher than that on the first. The mere caulking of basement ducts made a noticeable difference immediately and can easily be touched up over time.

Air moves, moderating toward a mean temperature that has more to do with physics than with human comfort. This is why tight, complete insulation is so useful. (In this 70-year-old house, too tight for good health is probably impossible.)

Another trick Rita Norton used – and so can you – is insulation.

Rita added cellulose insulation in September of 2005, replacing a thin layer of “horsehair” – apparently common in 1940 but noticeably feeble for blocking cold air and excessive heat. The thorough addition of cellulose insulation, blown into exterior walls, the attic and basement walls even and nearly draft-free heating and cooling. Inexpensive liners for exterior doors provide for draft-free interior spaces as well. The years since 2005 have continued to give her some impressive usage and cost comparisons.

The insulation enables mostly even temperatures throughout the house, regardless of the use of the furnace and air conditioning.

There is much more to solar, energy efficiency, green living, and potentially planet preserving steps that you can take than we can possibly showcase here.

But, if you are curious – a little investigation, and a modest investment can start you on the right path. So you, too, can turn green.

MEET THE NEW OMG BOARD MEMBERS BECCA HAGEMAN

Becca has lived on 66th Terrace for three years. She is a Kansas City transplant who grew up in a small town in Oklahoma. She attended the University of Arkansas where she received her bachelor's degree. Becca moved to Kansas City after graduating from the U of A and quickly fell in love with the city. Becca is a real estate professional with Compass Realty Group and has expertise in single family homes and condos. Becca also worked for Cerner when she first moved to Kansas City.

Becca and her husband Nick moved to OMG in 2019, "we immediately felt welcomed by the amazing neighbors and have the desire to make others feel the same. We also quickly began to appreciate the unique culture of Brookside, the caring and friendly neighbors, and also the beautiful character of each home. You might see my husband and me on frequent walks with our dog Otie. Otie is a rescue and looks like a white lab with black spots!"

Becca has served on several event planning committees and enjoys bringing people together. She also loves to golf, read, host people, and scheme up their next home project.
